

William Dingley, "Upon a Bee Entomb'd in Amber"

Description

[WILLIAM DINGLEY]

• Upon a BEE Entomb'd in Amber. •

Behold this happy Insect's Tomb,
Not sweet, but precious Honey-comb:
You'd think the Bee had brought it forth,
Alike in Colour, and in Worth.

Which to the view does represent,
5

A Murderer, and Monument.

I thought 'twas Niobe alone,
Whom Moisture harden'd into Stone:
But now the weeping Gem I see,
Transforms at once it self and

Bee: 10

Since to Beholders each does seem,
The Gem a Bee, the Bee a Gem.

The Pyramids in Egypt's Land,
Astonishment from all command:

Yet, happy insect, happy thou, 15

A lesser, but a better Show;
The Pyramids would envy me,
Should I be thus Entomb'd like thee.

Thou with Medusa may'st compare,
Whose Viperous enchanted Hair, 20

Turn'd all Spectators into Stone,
Conquest and Trophy both in one;
But thou excellest her in this,

Thy self at once Medusa is,
Thy self the Metamorphosis. 25

Nature has chang'd her usual course,
But for the Better not the Worse;
While Jewels sprout from Poplar-Trees,

These bring forth Jewels, Jewels Bees.

Thus whilst the Bee through Amber shone, 30

With borrowâ€™d Lustre, not her own,

The Sight so dazling did appear,

Youâ€™d think both Bees, both Jewels were.

The Golden Beast, like Bacchus Crown,

Translated to thâ€™Ethereal Throne, 35

35

Does, as it were, refinâ€™d appear,

Transformâ€™d from Gold into a Star:

Congeaâ€™d it lies in sparkling Gem,

Youâ€™d swear â€™twas froze to Death in Flame.

Entangled there it self does shew, 40

40

A Labyrinth, and Monster too.

What Freeman would not pay that Fee

Which Prisoners give for Liberty,

To share in this Captivity.

The little Debtor (she, you know, 45

45

To Amber does this Yellow owe)

Thither as to her Prison came,

Her Debt and Prison both the same.

A worthy, honourable Cheat!

Whose very Fetters made her Great: 50

50

For while she mute in Thraldome lies,

Her buzzing Fame much swifter flies.

Thoâ€™ she confinâ€™d, to us may seem,

Within the Limits of a Gem,

Sheâ€™s in effect, by being thus, 55

55

Extended through the Universe:

And by her forcâ€™d, yet willing stay,

Debarâ€™d from Flying, flies away.

Whose Hive, not long since, Thatcht we saw,

Like Romeâ€™s old Capitol, with Straw; 60

60

She now in nobler Structure dwells,

Which Romeâ€™s new Capitol excells.

Thou worthy Nurse of mighty Jove,

Supreme oâ€™re all the Gods above;

Tell me, thou Insect, tell me why, 65

65

When Harlots mounted to the Sky,

He did not thus thy Pains repay,

Deserving Heaven more than they?

But lo! I see thy proud Disdain
Has rendred Deifying vain. 70

So rich, so glorious they Attire,
A radiant, not a burning Fire;
That all those Lamps which grace the Sky,
Are seen Unenvyâ€™d by thy Eye.
â€™Twere Injury to fix thee there, 75

A brighter Constellation here.
Such is the dazzling Garb she wears,
Such Honour from the Garb she bears,
That thoâ€™ her Jove be cloathâ€™d with Rays
Immortal, and immortal Praise; 80

â€™Tis doubtful which does most confer,
The Bee on Jove, or Jove on her:
While she her self does represent,
As if to give the God, she meant,
Honour, instead of Nutriment. 85

Proud Animal! â€™tis mere Self-love,
Which makes thee like Narcissus prove;
Who viewâ€™d, himself in Chrystal Streams,
And, as he viewâ€™d, thence gatherâ€™d Flames:
In liquid Gum you clearer shine, 90

Others to Envy you incline,
Whilst you your self for Love repine.
True Looking-glass, wherein we view,
Not only Form, but Matter too.
The Eyes, which view this glorious Bee, 95

Are held almost as fast as she:
For while they gaze, in one, they view
Artificer, and Image too.
â€™Twas heedlessness this Artist taught,
Exact the Figure, yet not wrought; 100

Whom like Sejanus here we see,
Too truly slain in Effigy.
Fair Phaethusa (Stories shew)
A Poplar-tree by Weeping grew;
Weeping (Oh! had it sooner came) 105

Enough to quench her Brotherâ€™s Flame.
Hence first distillâ€™d the precious Juice,

And Trees the Amber did produce;

From whence a three-fold Change we see,

From humane Shape sprouts up a Tree, ^
110

Thence came forth Gum, and thence a Bee.

A Bee, which thus you may divide,

Object of Pity, and of Pride:

It Sister does, and Brother seem,

It Weeps like her, it Shines like him; ^
^ ^ ^ ^ 115

In both their Fates does Sympathize,

At once bewails the Dead, and Dies.

Virgin, too like the Crocodile!

Whose treach'rous Tears to Snares beguile,

Thy Weeping'ems, by Experience known, ^
^ ^ ^ ^ ^ 120

More Envious now than Pitteous grown.

Thy Tears, which first made thee a Tree,

And now again transform the Bee,

Harden themselves, and that, like Thee.

See how from Good, ariseth Ill! ^
^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ 125

While they bewail the Slain, they Kill.

But why, against th' industrious Bee,

Do Trees exert such Cruelty?

She little thinking e'ere to yield,

Securely Plunder'd all the Field; ^
^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ 130

For which she now in Chains must stay,

Chains richer than her former Prey.

Flowers, too weak to captive Bees,

Assistance crave from neighbour Trees;

Till they that were opprest before, ^
^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ 135

Retort the Dammage once they bore:

But Oh! tis thus, they add the more,

And, to deprive, increase the Store.

The cruel Nero, who (says Fame)

Rome doubly Dy'd in Blood and Flame, ^
^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ 140

Erected no such noble Throne;

No, tho' he built a Golden One,

As that wherein this Tyrant shone.

Most radiant, most illustrious Bee,

Iâ€™ll to the Phoenix liken thee, ^
^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ 145

In Death as rare, as bright as She;

Oh! were he Buryâ€™d there like thee,
His Tomb would prove him Deity.

NOTES:

Title Amber â€œA yellowish translucent fossil resin. It is used for ornaments; burns with an agreeable odor; often entombs the bodies of insectsâ€•(QED).

7 Niobe In Greek mythology, her children were killed by Apollo and Artemis. She was so overwhelmed with grief that the gods turned her weeping form into a rock on Mount Sipylus (EncyclopÃ©dia Britannica).

11 Beholder â€œOne who beholds, a watcher, looker on, spectatorâ€•(QED).

13 Pyramids in Egyptâ€™s Land â€œFocal points of enormous funerary complexes constructed for the burials of Egyptian kings. In the classical tradition, pyramids have been constructed primarily as tombs, often in conscious emulation of Egyptian Precedentâ€•(The Classical Tradition).

19 Medusa In Greek mythology, was changed by Athena to have snakes for hair and turn anyone who looked at her into stone (The Columbia Encyclopedia).

25 Metamorphosis â€œThe action or process of changing in form, shape, or substance; transformation by supernatural meansâ€•(QED).

28 Jewels sprout from Poplar-Trees When Phaethon died, his sisters, the Heliades, wept and were turned into poplar trees and their tears into amber (Dictionary of Classical Mythology).

34 The Golden Beast The bee, but also an allusion to Midas, who was granted a wish from Bacchus to have everything he touches turn to gold (The Classical Tradition); Bacchus Also known as Dionysus in Greek mythology. The god of wine, mystic ecstasy, and the theater (The Classical Tradition).

35 Ethereal â€œOf or relating to heave, God, or the gods; heavenly, celestialâ€•(QED).

41 Labyrinth, and Monster In Greek mythology, the monster is that of the Minotaur, composed of a manâ€™s body and bullâ€™s head, birthed from Pasiphae. The Labyrinth is the Cretan Labyrinth created by Daedalus to store the Minotaur in (Dictionary of Classical Mythology).

45 little Debtor The bee.

47 Thither â€œTo or towards that placeâ€•(QED).

50 Fetters â€œA chain or shackle for the feet; a bond, shackleâ€•(QED).

51 Thrall â€œThe state or condition of being a thrall; bondage, servitude; captivityâ€•(QED).

59 Thatcht â€œCovered or roofed with thatch;” that is “straw, reeds, palm-leaves, etc., laid so as to protect from the weatherâ€•(QED).

62 new Capitol Possible reference to the reconstruction of the Capital building done by Michelangelo in the 16th century (The Columbia Encyclopedia).

63 Nurse In Greek mythology, Amaltheia was a she-goat who nursed an infant Zeus (Dictionary of Classical Mythology)

); Jove Another name for the supreme god of Roman mythology, Jupiter; also known as Zeus in Greek mythology. Determined course of human affairs and made known the future through signs in the heavens, flight of birds, and other means; lord of heaven and bringer of light (Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable).

66 Harlots Likely a reference to Harpies; in Greek myth made of feathers, bronze, and flesh and had women's faces, vulture's bodies, and bronze talons (Bloomsbury Dictionary of Myth).

87 Narcissus In Greek mythology, famously beautiful boy who fell in love with his own reflection in the water and thus died of his infatuation (The Classical Tradition).

92 repine To feel or express discontent or dissatisfaction; to grumble, complain (QED).

101 Sejanus Lucius Aelius Sejanus (20 BC-AD31), Roman soldier and statesman; according to Juvenal, after Sejanus's fall from power and execution his statuary was destroyed (Satire 10). Possibly also a reference to Sejanus His Fall (1603), a satirical tragedy by Ben Jonson. In the play, Sejanus is driven by extreme ambition and attempts to occupy the Roman throne, exploiting the emperor Tiberius, but is eventually torn to pieces by the Roman mob (The Bloomsbury Dictionary of English Literature).

102 slain in Effigy A likeness, portrait, or image; to inflict upon an image the semblance of the punishment which the original is considered to have deserved (QED).

103 Phaethusa In Greek mythology, one of Helios's daughters born from his mistress Neaera (Dictionary of Classical Mythology). See note 28.

118 Crocodile The phrase "crocodile tears" is meant as false or hypocritical tears (Dictionary of Literary Symbols). Was said to weep, either to allure a man for the purpose of devouring him, or while devouring him (QED).

139 Nero (37AD-86AD), Roman emperor who turned to debauchery, extravagance, and tyranny. During his reign, two-thirds of Rome was destroyed by fire (Chambers Biographical Dictionary).

142 Golden One Palace, also known as Domus Aurea, built by Nero after the fire. The palace was notoriously grand and novel (The Classical Tradition).

145 Phoenix In classical mythology: a bird resembling an eagle but with sumptuous red and gold plumage, which was said to live for five or six hundred years before burning itself to ashes on a funeral pyre ignited by the sun and fanned by its own wings, only to rise from its ashes with renewed youth to live through another such cycle (QED).

147 Phoebus Apollo as the god of light or of the sun; the sun personified (QED).

152 Icarus In Greek myth, was the son of Daedalus who invented wings made out of wax and feathers. Icarus flew with these wings towards the sun and the heat loosened the wax and caused him to fall and drown in the ocean (Bloomsbury Dictionary of Myth).

161 specious Fair or pleasing to the eye or sight; beautiful, handsome, lovely (QED); Epitaph An inscription upon a tomb; a brief composition characterizing a deceased person (QED).

162 Corps Corpse.

172 Thetis Daughter of Nereus in Greek myth, was a beautiful sea-nymph who the Fates said would bear a son greater than his father (Bloomsbury Dictionary of Myth).

173 her Son The Greek hero, Achilles born from the sea-nymph Thetis and was half human from his father Peleus. Thetis tried to make him immortal by dipping him into the River Styx (Dictionary of Classical Mythology).

174 Stygian Lake Pertaining to the river Styx (QED).

175 Styx A river of the lower world or Hades, over which the shades of the departed were ferried by Charon, and by which the gods swore their most solemn oaths (QED).

180 Hercules A celebrated hero of Greek and Roman mythology, who after death was ranked among the gods and received divine honors. He is represented as possessed of prodigious strength (QED).

181 Aeta Archaic spelling of Oeta referring to Mt. Oeta in central Greece, the location of the funeral pyre for Heracles in Greek myth (also known as Hercules) (Dictionary of Classical Mythology).

185 Creet The Greek island, Crete.

Source: Poems on Several Occasions. Originals, and Translations ([London?], 1694), pp. 9-17. [Google Books]

Edited by Kasside Sahagun-Escalante