

Matthew Pilkington, “The Progress of Musick in Ireland, to Mira”

Description

MATTHEW PILKINGTON

“The Progress of Musick in Ireland, to Mira”

The poet in fact is taught by Love, even if he has no skill before.

Eurip[ides], Sthenoboea.

By thee enjoyn'd th'obsequious Muse obeys,

Yet, trembling, dreads the Danger she surveys,

But vain are Infant Fears, I plead in vain,

The Task too Noble, too Sublime the Strain,

The Fancy's wing'd, and springs to bolder Flights, ^

^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ ^ 5

When Beauty bids, and Harmony invites;

For each, our Passions pleasingly controuls;

Love's but the purer Harmony of Souls:

Musick and Love the savage World refin'd,

Reform'd the Manners, while they rais'd the Mind, ^

10

Gave Man a Foretaste of the Joys above;

For what is Heav'n but Harmony and Love?

Hibernia long beheld, with Sorrow fillâ€™d,
 Her Poets and her Sons in Arts unskillâ€™d:
 Sons! dead to Fame, nor comely to the Sight, 15
 Their Customs wild, their Manners unpolite;
 Nor yet couâ€™d Musick boast persuasive Charms,
 To tempt one sprightly Genius to her Arms:
 The Muse, in mournful Pomp, laments her Case,
 Pale Grief and Anguish painted in her Face; 20
 To lonely Woods retire the tuneful Throng,
 Uncharmâ€™d by Sound, and negligent of Song:
 The silent Lark forgets to wake the Dawn
 With early Song, suspended oâ€™er the Lawn,
 On Earth he Pines, and droops his useless
 Wings 25
 With dumb Concern, and neither Soars nor Sings.

At length a Swain, long torturâ€™d with Despair,
 The Scorn of some inexorable Fair,
 Haunted each Grove, each dark Retreat of Grief,
 Bereft of Ease, and hopeless of Relief; 30
 Nightly he heard sad Philomel complain,
 And wishâ€™d to copy so divine a Strain,
 So clear, so soft the plaintive Warbler sung,
 The Groves, and Hills with plaintive Echoes rung.
 Her Notes so mournfully melodious flow, 35
 They calm his Soul, and mitigate his Woe,
 Distressful Passion both alike bewail,
 He sighs his Grief, she chants her piteous Tale.

Fain would he Sing; his Voice was still suppress
 By swelling Sighs, which struggled from his Breast. 40
 Despair, whose Sting can haughtiest Minds controul,
 Unstrings his Nerves, and quite unmans his Soul,
 Breathes a wild Horror into evâ€™ry Part,
 Restrains his Tongue, and preys upon his Heart.

But near the Grove, where comfortless he lies, 45
 The spiky Reeds in waving Clusters rise,
 He models one, and his Invention tires,
 Varying its Form as Art or Chance inspires:

85

And wants in the search of nobler Lays.
Extended Strings at length Experience found,
Start at the Touch, and tremble into Sound;
Of which a Vocal Multitude conspire,

In shining Order plac'd to form the Lyre: 90

And thus the Strings, as in a Choir combin'd,
Have each their parts of Harmony assign'd:

Some heav'nly Sounds transportingly create,
Like Echo some the heav'nly Sounds repeat,

Those plac'd above, rejoice in sprightly Tones, 95

Below the rough, hoarse Base, responsive, Groans.

If the judicious Artist bids them Play,
The dancing Cords in Silver Sounds obey,
But struck with Hands unskill'd, they spring to War,
Hiss out their Rage, and in harsh Discords jar. 100

Musick henceforward more Domestick grew,
Courts the throng Towns, and from the Plains withdrew:

The Vagrant Bard his circling Visits pays,
And charms the Villages with venal Lays.

The solemn Harp, beneath his Shoulder plac'd, 105

With both his Arms is earnestly embrac'd,
Sweetly irregular, now swift, now slow,

With soft Variety his Numbers flow,

The shrill, the deep, the gentle, and the strong,

With pleasing Dissonance adorn his Song; 110

While thro' the Cords his Hands unweary'd range,
The Musick changing as his Fingers change.

The Croud transported in Attention hung,
Their Breath in Silence sleeps upon the Tongue,

The Wheels forget to turn, the Labours cease, 115

And ev'ry Sound but Musick sinks to Peace.

So when the Thracian charm'd the Shades below,
And brought down Raptures to the Realms of Woe,

Despairing Ghosts from Labour stand releas'd,

Each Wheel, each Instrument of Torture ceas'd; 120

The Furies drop their Whips, afflictive Pain

Suspends, with ghastly Smiles, her Iron Reign,
All Groans were stillâ€™d, all Sorrow lullâ€™d to Rest,
And evâ€™ry Care was hushâ€™d in evâ€™ry Breast.

Joy spreads her Wings oâ€™er all the rapturâ€™d Isle, Â
Â
125
And bids each Face be brightâ€™ned to a Smile.
Now Nature, pleasâ€™d, her Gifts profusely Pours,
To Paint the chearful Earth with odâ€™rous Flowâ€™rs,
So changâ€™d a Scene she wonders to survey,
And bids evâ€™n Things inanimate look Gay. Â
Â
130

The Muses now from Albionâ€™s Isle retreat,
And here with kind Indulgence fix their Seat:
Then Viner rose, with all their warmth inspirâ€™d,
A Bard caressâ€™d by all, by all admirâ€™d;
He Choral strings, in sleepy Silence bound, Â
Â
135
Touchâ€™d into Voice, and wakenâ€™d into Sound;
Then taught those Sounds to flow with easy Art,
To wooe the Soul, and glide into the Heart,
In Notes, untryâ€™d before, his Fancy dressâ€™t,
And bid new transports rise in evâ€™ry Breast. Â
Â
140

While round in Crouds the fair Creation stand,
The polishâ€™d Viol trembling in his Hand,
While swift as Thought, from note to note he springs,
Flies oâ€™er thâ€™ unerring Tones, and sweeps the sounding Strings,
The Old, the Young, the Serious, and the Gay, Â
Â
145
With ravishâ€™d Ears devour the â€™witching Lay;
The Loverâ€™s Eyes now languishingly Roll,
And speak the Dictates of the rapturâ€™d Soul;
Foes, in whose Breasts the wildest Passion strove,
Forget their Rage, and soften into Love: Â
Â
150
The prideful Beauty, feels with new Surprize
Her Bosom swell, and wonders why she Sighs,
Each Passion acts as he affects the Heart,
And Nature answers evâ€™ry stroke of Art.

But now refinâ€™d Hiberniaâ€™s ravishâ€™d Throng, Â
Â
155
With wonder dwell on Nicholiniâ€™s Song,
Whose warbling Voice and tuneful Tongue dispencc,
The blended harmony of Sound and Sense:

With these he knew the listâ€™ning Soul to charm,
And evâ€™ry Torment of its Sting disarm, 160
Couâ€™d calm the harsh disturber Care, to ease,
With Fear delight us, and with Sorrow please;
Couâ€™d warm the kindling Soul with amâ€™rous Fire,
And Raptures, which he never felt, inspire.

While Musick thus its native Beauty shows, 165
And, from its living Spring delightful flows,
How does it raise! how gladden evâ€™ry Heart!
How far transcend the mimic Voice of Art!

So, when Belinda’s heavâ€™nly Beauties stand,
Wrought into Life, by Kneller’s magic Hand, 170
Her Face, her Shape, have all that Art can give,
Start from the animated Paint, and Live;
But, when the real Nymph, divinâ€™ly bright,
Arrayâ€™d in native Lustre, strikes our Sight,
Some nameless transport in our Bosom plays, 175
That Shade and Colour want the Force to raise.

Dubourg next sways the Soul with nicest Art,
And binds in airy Chains the captive Heart,
While from the vocal Strings, and shifting Bow,
At his nice Touch thâ€™ obsequious Numbers flow. 180
With easy toil he swells the Notes aloud,
Now on the Ear precipitant they croud,
Now, scarcely heard, they gradually decay,
And with melodious Cadence waste away,
While at his melting Falls, and dying Notes, 185
Around the Heart the liquid Rapture floats.

With martial Ardor if he boldly warms,
The animated Hero pants for Arms,
With guiltless Rage thâ€™ impetuous Spirit glows,
And prostrates Legions of imaginâ€™d Foes. 190

But, if to Mirth, a sprightly strain inclines,
With Humour fraught his quickening Genius shines,
Then, smiling Joys thro' every Aspect fly,
Glow in the Lips, and wanton in the Eye.

Next Bocchi Reigns, whom Art and Nature grace
To smooth the roughness of the sullen Base,
Directs his Notes distinct to rise or fall,
Tries every Tone to charm, and charms in all.

Th' awakened Muse thus rises, thus refines,
Improves with Time, and in Perfection shines;
The first rude Lays are now but meanly priz'd,
As rude, neglected, as untun'd, despis'd:
Dead (in Esteem too dead) the Bards that sung,
The Fife neglected, and the Harp unstrung.

So when the Thrush exalts his chearful Throat,
To glad the Fields with many an artless Note,
With rude Delight the Listener's Breast he warms,
Wild though he sings, his sylvan Wildness charms;
But if the warbling Nightingale prepares
Her softer Voice, that melts with thrilling Airs,
The Winds are hush'd, still Silence reigns around,
And listening Echo dwells upon the Sound;
Harsh seem the Strains which gave Delight before,
And far excell'd, those Strains delight no more.

The pausing Muse now shuts her venturous Wings,
And, anxious of Success, distrustful sings;
O! might her Lays to thy Esteem succeed,
For whom she tun'd her artless Voice and Reed,
Thy Smiles would swell her Heart with honest Pride,
Approved by thee she scorns the World beside.

NOTES:

Title Mira Laetitia Van Lewen (1709-1750) married Pilkington in 1725, noted for her exceptional singing voice. Several other pieces in his Poems on Several Occasions are dedicated to her.

Epigraph From Stheneboea, a play fragment by Euripides (c. 480-c. 406 BC), given in ancient Greek. Translation from C. Collard, et al, eds., Euripides: Selected Fragmentary Plays (Liverpool UP, 2009), fragment 663, p. 88.

13 Hibernia Irland (Oxford Classical Dictionary).

31 Philomel A nightingale (OED).

51 its Emended from "it's," a printer's error.

66 Numbers â€œVersesâ€œ (QED).

70 Fife â€œA small shrill-toned instrument of the flute kindâ€œ (QED).

77 Mien â€œThe look, bearing, manner, or conduct of a person, as showing character, moodâ€œ (QED).

103 Bard Turlough Oâ€™Carolan (1670-1738, also Terrence Oâ€™Carolan), blind Irish composer and harpist; renowned for his improvisational verse (Brittanica).

117 the Thracian charmâ€™d the Shades below A reference to Orpheus, mythological Greek poet and musician of Thracian origin. After the death of his wife, Eurydice, at the suggestion of the gods, Orpheus descended to the underworld and charmed Hades and Persephone with his song (Oxford Classical Dictionary).

121 Furies Also called Erinyes; Greek spirits of punishment, avenging wrongs done to kindred (Oxford Classical Dictionary).

131 Albionâ€™s Isle Britain (Oxford Classical Dictionary).

133 Viner William Viner (1650-1716), English violinist, composer and Master of the State Music in Ireland from 1703 until his death (Dictionary of Irish Biography).

138 wooe Alternate form of "woo;" to court a person, typically a woman (QED).

156 Nicholini Nicolo Grimaldi (1673-1732), Italian opera singer, alto castrato (The Harvard Biographical Dictionary of Music).

160 its Emended from "it's," a printer's error.

161 Care â€œA burdened state of mind arising from fear, doubt or concern about anythingâ€œ (QED).

169 Belinda *The main character in Alexander Pope's popular mock-heroic poem The Rape of the Lock (1714); based on Arabella Fermor (1696-1737), who was renowned at the time for her beauty.*

170 Kneller Sir Godfrey Kneller (1646-1723), English portrait painter. One of the three known portraits of Arabella Fermor is attributed to him.

177 Dubourg Matthew Dubourg (1703-1767), English violinist, preternaturally gifted and was appointed Master of the State Music in Ireland in 1728, a position he held until his death (Dictionary of Irish Biography).

195 Bocchi *Lorenzo Bocchi (d. 1725), Italian cellist; he is believed to be responsible for introducing the cello to both Scotland and Ireland (R. Cowgill and P. Holman, eds., Music in the British Provinces, 1690-1914, p. 4).*

SOURCE: Poems on Several Occasions (Dublin, 1730), pp. 3-25. ^ [Google Books]

Edited by Jerry Andersen